

Earth Hour: A Lights-Out Event for Our Planet by Nanette Heffernan; illustrated by Bao Luu

Reviewed by Jo

For the younger reader, this book explains that energy is a precious resource that should be respected, providing us with light, heat, and power. People all over the world show this by turning off their lights to observe Earth Hour. The last two pages contain more detail explaining Earth Hour, how energy consumption affects climate change, and why it is important to respect our resources. The beautiful illustrations take the reader on a journey around the world and into other cultures, showing that people are similar all over the planet, caring for our limited resources.

Available from Newcastle Libraries